Tableaux Anthony and Cleopatra Circa 40 B.C.

The conspirators who brought about the assassination of Julius Caesar were defeated at Philippi by Antony, Octavius and Lepidus. These three divided the Roman Empire and the East fell to Antony. He fell in love with Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, and forgot duty and fidelity in the charms of the "enchanted queen" of the Nile.

The tableaux shows Antony accompanied by his friend Enobarbus entering the court where Cleopatra is seated on the throne, attended by her ladies-in-waiting, guards, slaves, etc.

Tableaux..... Falstaff gets into the basketCirca 1600

Sir John Falstaff laid siege to the affections of Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, two women of wit and virtue. They pretended to encourage him only that they might punish the presumption of the portly knight by humiliating him. When Falstaff came to keep an appointment with Mistress Ford he found a basket of dirty linen and two men-servants ready to carry it to the wash. Mistress Page arrived breathless with the news that Ford and Page had received word of Falstaff's court of their wives and were even then hastening to avenge themselves on the unlucky lover. The terrified knight was easily persuaded that the basket was his only means of escape. He got in, was covered by the soiled linen, carried out on the shoulders of the servants and, having successfully eluded the irate husbands, was thrown into the River Thames.

INTERVAL AND PARODY

Programme--part two

Tableaux Cordelia Disowned by Lear Circa 800 B.C.

Lear, King of Britain, had three daughters of whom he loved the youngest, Cordelia, most. Being desirous of escaping the cares of state in his old age, he called his daughters before him that he might divide his kingdom among them. He first asked which of them loved him most, promising to her the largest share of his kingdom. The two older daughters made eloquent but insincere protestations of their love. Cordelia was called upon, but, disgusted by her sisters' falsehood, refused to do more than to love him according to her duty. Lear, overcome by this seeming coldness, banished her from his court together with the Duke of Kent who had interfered in her behalf.

1923 == Parody == 1923

Sung by Tom Dalton and Robert Falconer

There's an Academy in our town
We are proud to say
Students come from far and near
To learn new things each day
Famous men have studied here
In the days gone by
To them all our school is dear and I'll say we know why.

Our principal is Mr. Moore
We think he's just right
—Sometimes when we misbehave
His frown gives us a fright
Kedy says "Now, get this, please"
You bet we "get it" too
And Goode shouts "Oh, waken up
Now, Class, this will not do!"

Clarke explains how levers work
And rules at P. A. Hall
And Brownell who shares his task
Is mighty though he's small
Harris isn't very cross—
That is when we're good
We will not forget Dean Ross—we wouldn't if we could.

CHORUS:

Yes! we sure have good teachers
We've fine teachers here at P.A.
There's Fowles and his daughter
From England he brought her
In music they hold full sway
We have our wee teacher of Shorthand
While Miss Hurst rules in cake-
land
Mrs. Brown likes the colors and Hughie Mac cleans up
P. A.

There is much that we might tell
'Bout the sixty A's
Some of them like Isabel (?)
Have very studious ways
Alex Fraser leads the class
Frances too is bright
And those who read the Advocate
Will find that we are right.

Helen I, and Olive Hill
Know their lessons well
Oh! there are many clever ones
Of whom we'd like to tell
Tutill thinks of all the girls
Helen C. is best
Hibbie in pursuit of Lou has scarcely any rest.

Jennie's thoughts roam Trenton way
Kenny's to Pinehill
Hilda would be dead indeed
If Barney's smiles would kill Allan thinks that in Kathleen
Some Profitt he has found Victor surely does like Kay and Goo with Bob goes 'round.

CHORUS:

Yes! we've all kinds of students
All kinds of them here at P. A.
There's Jean who's a tall one and Catherine's a small one While Carson grows cuter each day
There are boys stalwart and mighty

Parody--continued

There are girls powdered and flighty
Oh, yes! we've all kinds of students and now we are through with the A's.

First of the B's comes Isabel
And Morley's just as high
Teddie Grant is fond of Pont
And "Big Jim's" fond of pie.
Joe to Della his heart has given
Ab, from Ham, gets notes
Caroline breaks many hearts and Slink the Scripture quotes.

Margaret thinks that Cuyler's sweet

And Hindu sure can kick
Ginny and Jack the Smiths do meet

Jean and Rus' are thick,
St. Peter doth the Daisies pick
While Phyllis likes to Fish [er]
Now we're finished with the B's—for their success we wish.

Now to speak about the C's
They're a hefty lot
First in weight comes Fatty I.

First in brains comes Dot.
Bill and Slap are quite a pair
The Spaniard dotes on Jean
Laura from the Landing comes and also Mr. Shean.

Last of all there come the D's
Varying much in size
Judging by their splendid marks
They must be very wise
The Manzlers are the brightest ones
Fergus too makes high
Now for want of time and space
The rest we must pass by.

CHORUS:

Yes! we all are so happy
For Xmas vacation is here
Be nights dark and dreary
Be days bright and cheery
We're glad that the winter's here
For there'll be good coasting and skating

While these joys we're relating
We wish you all Merry Xmas—a Bright and a Happy New Year.
